Help and Support for Parents and Carers of Children with SEND (Special Educational Needs and Disabilities)

For everyone and for our children with SEND these are strange and difficult times and they may be finding current events and restrictions especially difficult to make sense of.

Here are some sources of help and advice which you may find useful, and some resources to use at home with your children.

Stay safe and keep well.

Bitesize

Parents' Toolkit: SEND

BBC Bitesize have put together a Parents Toolkit with SEND with excellent resources, activities and support to help you and your family during lockdown.

The Oak National Academy have provided high-quality, sequenced video lessons and resources in several specialist areas, including Communication and Language, Creative Arts, Independent Living, Numeracy and Therapies, which you may find helpful. Please look at the Specialist therapies section which is very good and the online lesson which are also signed and use visuals. I would highly recommend this website 😊

POINT (an information and advice service for families of children and young people with additional needs and/or disabilities) have compiled a list of useful educational, creative and activity resources that will be helpful for families to access from home

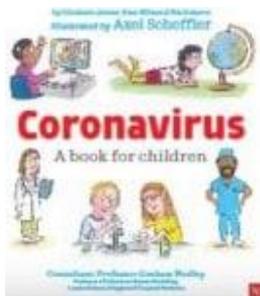

The Chatterpack website has lots of free Speech and language, OT, and many other SEND resources for families.

The Stay-at-Home Superheroes

This book from Sophie Marsh is aimed at younger children and explains how by staying at home we are all helping to keep everybody safe.

Coronavirus – A Book for Children

You may find this book useful to help explain why we have to stay away from each other to stay safe. This is also in audio format.
